Adventures in Preservation Spotlighted by Travel with a Challenge

Boulder, Colorado, October 3, 2009 - Adventures in Preservation's hands-on holidays were highlighted in Travel with a Challenge's October/November web magazine. The spotlight article focused on AiP's 2010 volunteer vacation itinerary and gave special mention to AiP's new family-oriented vacation, involving a week-long immersion in the American Old West mining town of Nevada City, Montana.

Adventures in Preservation was named as a "respected volunteer heritage conservation non-profit", providing volunteer participants with the opportunity to work with local communities in Kenya, Albania, Slovenia, Armenia and the U.S.

The Travel with a Challenge article noted that AiP had recently changed its name from Heritage Conservation Network, and "the name change highlights the participant experience and reflects the critical role that workshop participants play in each project's success."

Travel with a Challenge is an eight-year-old globally popular travel information website largely addressing the interests and agendas of the educated, proactive older traveler, aged 45 to 80 years old. The TWAC website attracts about 1.4 million travel-hungry readers a year from 158 countries. The key themes addressed in the magazine represent alternative travel, i.e. ecological educational, cultural/historical and volunteer vacations worldwide.
